Dear Ilse

As you know several months ago we installed the Oxyvital Environmental machines into our offices, and I thought you might like to share our experience with other companies who may also be considering investing in this unique equipment, especially given the extremely poor air quality facing us daily.

Our company, like so many others, constantly had absent staff because of illness (colds, 'flu's, headaches etc), and clearly low productivity was becoming an issue through this, and also poor concentration. We concluded this situation was not a reflection on the quality of our employees, but rather our shared working environment was not as healthy as it should be. The subsequent IAQ tests undertaken in fact confirmed the presence of high levels of many of the known contaminants, including formaldehyde. We then took the decision to install Oxyvital.

Since that time we have clearly seen a positive change in staff morale and productivity – our employees certainly are healthier with a dramatic reduction in absenteeism from sick leave. Interestingly also our visitors regularly comment on the freshness of the office environment.

Overall the introduction of the Oxyvital equipment has made an extremely positive impact on our company in many ways, and as well we look forward to continuing to enjoy better air at home following the installation of another unit there.

With kindest regards
